

The Brothers Grimm—Jacob and Willhelm Grimm—were born just a year apart from each other during the 1780s in Germany. As linguists, they had a strong interest in folklore and wanted to express their love for medieval literature by writing stories of their own. Their works are loved by families and children all around the world, so Penguin decided, in celebration of Jacob’s 250th birthday, to re-release their works in the English language whilst preserving their original vision.

Praise for “Rapunzel”

“My kid ate the pages, he seemed to like it. Tons of nutritional value for him.” - A newspaper

“It’s good I guess” - Another newspaper

“Idk i kinda liked it” - A homeless man on the street

“PubLEASE get out of my office” - My boss

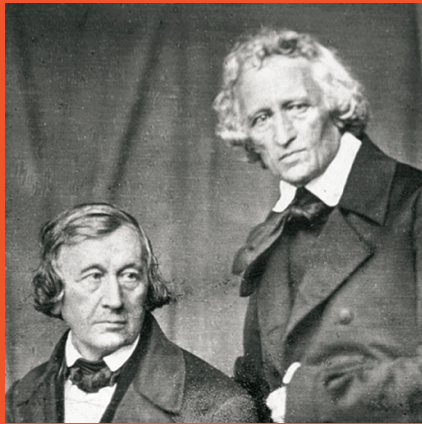

GRIMM

RAPUNZEL

Rapunzel lives far away from any village or kingdom in a castle, ostracized from society by an enchantress. Once a prince comes to the castle out of curiosity, Rapunzel now has the choice to potentially head out to the outside world via the prince’s generosity. Will she be able to leave without the enchantress catching her?

GRIMM

BROTHERS
GRIMM
CLASSICS

The Brothers Grimm—Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm—were born just a year apart from each other during the 1780s in Germany. As linguists, they had a strong interest in folklore and wanted to express their love for medieval literature by writing stories of their own. Their works are loved by families and children all around the world, so Penguin decided, in celebration of Jacob’s 250th birthday, to re-release their works in the English language whilst preserving their original vision.

Praise for “Little Red Riding Hood”

“One of the greatest sandwiches I’ve ever tasted. Wait, we’re talking about the book?” - You

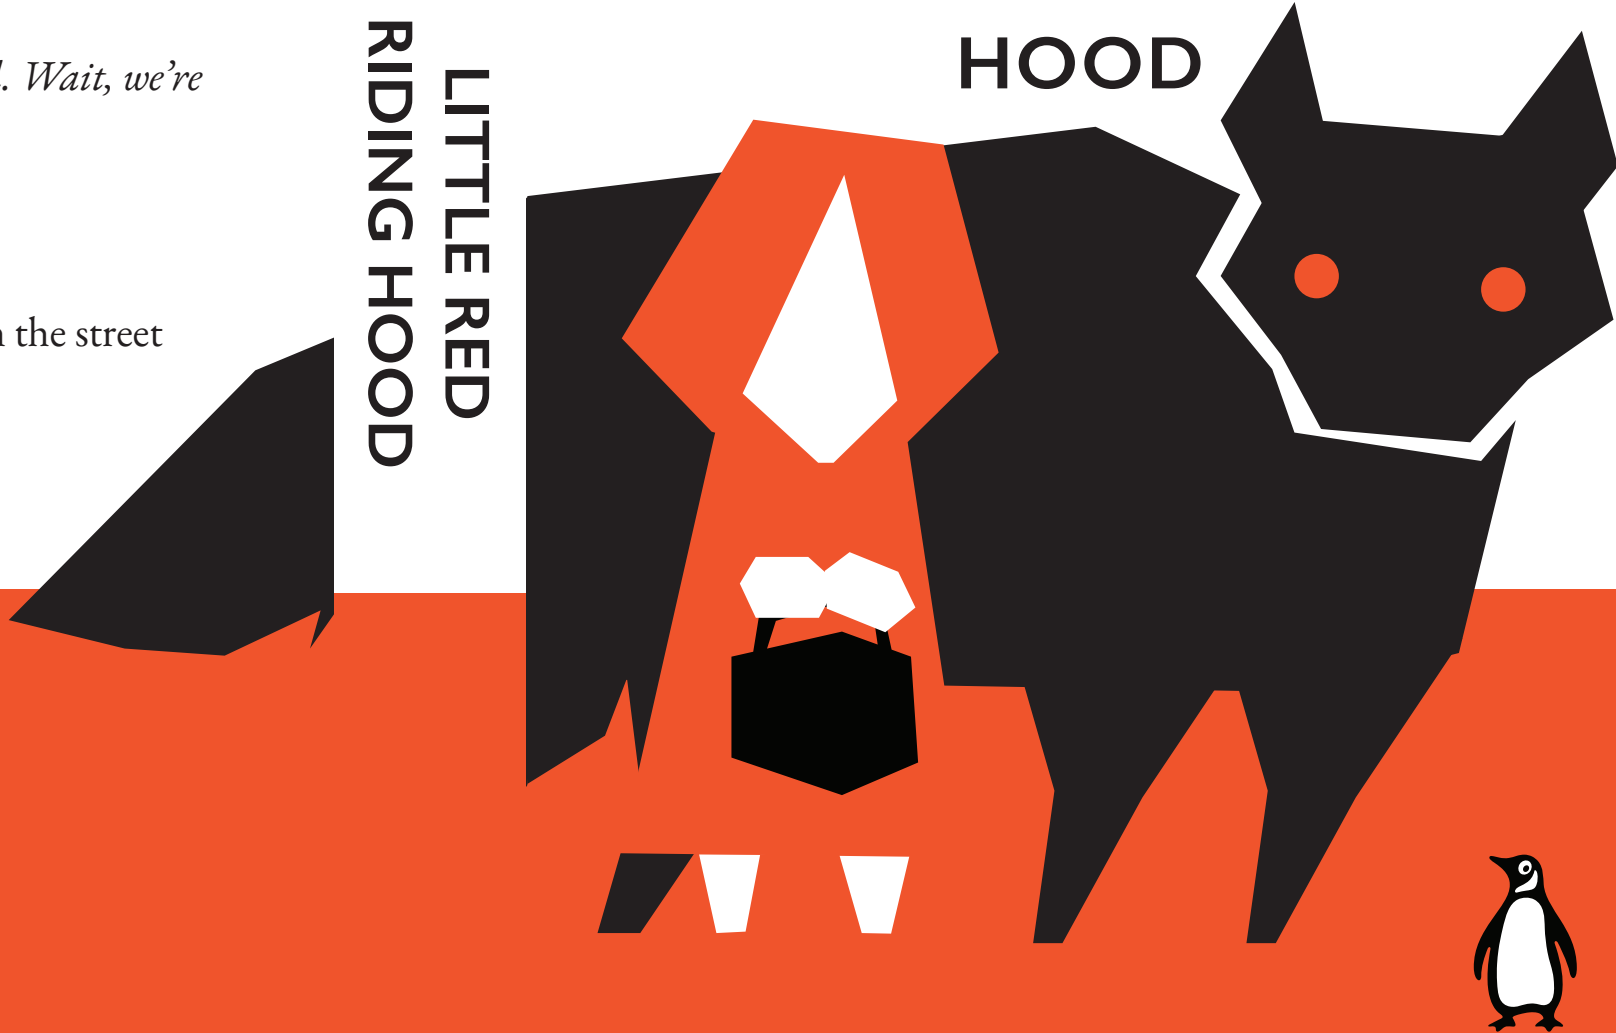

“I like the pretty pictures” - Jimmy Lane, age 5

“Spare change for food?” - A homeless man on the street

“You’re hired, get in my office” - My boss

LITTLE RED
RIDING HOOD

LITTLE RED RIDING
HOOD

Little Red Riding Hood has to go drop off some cake and wine for her sickly grandmother. Instead of going on a paved path like her mother warned her, Red goes through the woods. On the way she meets a wolf and, being a little too trusting, tells her exactly where she’s going. What will happen to grandma? Will Red ever be safe from harm? And where does a lumberjack play into this?

